A NEW MAGAZINE.

On the first of February will be published, NUMBER FIRST.—(Price ONE SHILLING).—

OF THE EDINBURGH MAGAZINE;

OR, MONTHLY MISCELLANY.

Containing whatever is most valuable or entertaining in the ENGLISH and FOREIGN PERIODICAL PUBLICATIONS; with a variety of ORIGINAL PIECES.

Printed for, and sold by J. SIBBALD, Parliament Square; by whom communications will be received with gratitude, and immediately transmitted to the Editor.

The nature of this publication is sufficiently pointed out by its title. To such as are in a habit of looking into the London Magazines with any attention, a judicious selection from them must appear a thing desirable. The Literary Miscellanies published monthly in France, and other parts of the Continent, with which the publisher of the Edinburgh Magazine shall take care to be regularly provided, will afford likewise an ample supply of valuable and interesting materials. From these two sources certainly might be drawn what would be sufficient to form one VALUABLE REPOSITORY, independent altogether of original pieces. But even of them, in a city and country famed for learning and taste, the publisher has no reason to apprehend any scarcity. Indeed, he has already been honoured with the correspondence of some most respectable literary characters, and with very obliging offers of assistance from several others, whose names, were he at liberty to mention them, would at once stamp authority upon this publication.

It is proposed not to give any high finished Engravings, of such kind of "interesting scenes," as are entitled, A Sentimental Tete a Tete, or the Unfortunate Discovery, or the Cruel Separation: Nor any of those striking illustrations by eminent Artists, that to day serve to represent the Prince of Wales, and to-morrow signify Linnæus. He hopes, that in the opinion of very few, will the merit of a Magazine be diminished by such petty embellishments.

It is necessary to take notice of another variation.—As nobody thinks of looking into a monthly publication for what is commonly called news, the historical part will be given only once every six months, and will form a large appendix to each volume. It will contain a connected view of national affairs, together with a register of events more complete, and at the same time more authentic, than it possibly could have been if published monthly.

Such is the plan which the publisher means to pursue—Its merit, and that of its execution, he humbly submits to the tribunal of the public, according to whose decision his undertaking must fall or flourish.

Whitehall, January 22.

The following address of the gentlemen, clergy, freemen and freeholders of the city of Dublin, having been transmitted by his Grace the Duke of Rutland, Lord Lieutenant of the kingdom of Ireland, to the Right Honourable Lord Sydney, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the home department, has, by his Lordship, been presented to the King: Which address his Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the KING's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Gentlemen, Clergy, Freemen and Freeholders of the city of Dublin, whose names are hereto subscribed.

Most gracious Sovereign,

WE your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, humbly beg leave to approach your Royal Person with the warmest affection, duty, and respect, and with the most sincere professions of inviolable attachment to your Majesty's government, and to our happy constitution.

We might justly be deemed insensible and unworthy of the blessings of which, through your Majesty's auspicious care, through the justice and liberality of Great Britain, and through the wife and firm exertions of our legislature, we have obtained the enjoyment, if we omitted this seasonable occasion of declaring our rooted abhorrence of every attempt to create unjust and dangerous discontents, tending to subvert the constitution in church and state. We reject, with indignation, the interference of any body of men unknown to the laws or constitution. We rely upon the continuance of your Majesty's paternal regard for the welfare of this kingdom, feeling the warmest and most grateful confidence in your Majesty's late gracious declaration, and in the equity and wisdom of the respective legislatures of Great Britain and Ireland, that such regulations upon the important objects of trade and commerce will be established, as shall be found best calculated to promote the wealth and prosperity of all parts of your Majesty's empire. We cherish a firm and unchangeable attachment to the connection with our sister kingdom, as the great band of mutual strength and safety. And we will suffer no assumed authority to dictate to the Legislature of the land.

[This address was signed by 21 Peers, and 1100 Commoners.]

INTELLIGENCE FROM LLOYD'S, Jan. 21.

THE following ships were arrived at Madras in the months of June and July, viz. Foulis, Postborne, Hildborough, Contractor, Valentine, Middlesex, and Earl Mansfield.

The Ganges sailed from St Helena the 18th of October, and left no ships there.

The Mary Ann, Young, from Bristol for Boston, is lost near Plymouth in New England.

The Robert and Ann, McDowgal, from Maryland to London, sprung a leak at sea, and is put into St Andro to unload; it is feared the ship must be condemned; the cargo is much damaged.

The Amy, Salmon, from London to Dublin, is put into Waterford by contrary winds.

The Medway transport, Miller, has been on shore in the Bay of Fundy, but is got off and under repair.

The Grantham packet, arrived at Falmouth, spoke, on the 7th inst. with the Vernon, Shaw, from Jamaica to London, who had been out 67 days, in long 13. W. on the 2d inst. met with heavy gales of wind, which carried away her head, &c. The same day spoke the Sally, Crokili, from New Providence to London, who had been out 46 days, in long 10. W. On the 9th inst. fell in with the General Elliott, Lee, from Newfoundland to Dartmouth, had been out 7 weeks: On the 1st inst. in a gale of wind, she lost all her masts, &c. and having 4 feet water in her hold, and in want of provisions, the people quitted her, and were taken on board the Grantham.

From the London Papers, Jan. 22.

Paris, Jan. 10. They write from Versailles, that the excerpts of that quarter went into all the coffee-houses and public places, and gave notice, that if any persons should report as certain a declaration of war between France and the Emperor, they would be sent to prison. This order, on the part of the ministry, arises from a precaution observed towards the Queen, who is made very unhappy, in her present state of pregnancy, by any imprudent reports that give her reason to fear a rupture of the peace and union which at present subsist between her husband and brother.

The Count de Robadange, as Inspector, received yesterday an order from the Marshal de Segur, as did also his colleagues, to inform all the officers now upon furlow, that they have leave not to rejoin their different corps, till they are joined by their Colonels.

The Marquis de Castries has declared publicly that peace is certain.

Liege, Jan. 12. The military preparations which were making in our environs have ceased suddenly by an Imperial order. It is asserted, that France has so far prevailed over the Emperor's disposition as to awaken in his mind all those sentiments of humanity which have hitherto characterized that monarch.

Vienna, Jan. 1. Our letters from Trieste bring, that the Governor of that place, to whom an order had been sent to prepare three batteries, against any attack from the Dutch, had since received a counter-order to discontinue them.

Vienna, Dec. 29. They write from Transylvania, that on the 25th of last month several of the Wallachian rebels were put to death at Carlsbourg and Mulbach, the son of Horiath, one of the chiefs of the insurgents, being impaled, and the others beheaded.

Hamburg, Dec. 25. According to estimates circulating here of the military forces of several of the European powers, it appears, that the Prussian armies are composed of 263,011 men, of whom 163,809 are infantry, and 39,202 cavalry; and that they are thus divided: Artillery 10,560 men; in the Marche, 41,560 infantry, and 3996 cavalry; in Magdebourg, 16,632 infantry, and 3440 cavalry; in Pomerania, 11,750 infantry, and 7646 cavalry; in Prussia, 32,102 infantry, and 11,586 cavalry; in Westphalia, 13,088 infantry; and in Silesia, 38,217 foot, and 12,434 horse.

L O N D O N.

This morning, some dispatches were received from Philadelphia, which were brought over in the Patty, Captain Rutledge, arrived at Cowes.

Just as the King left St James's yesterday, the Austrian Minister arrived, in order to have had an audience; but as his Majesty was gone, he held a conference with the two Secretaries of State.

We hear from good authority, that Dr Franklin, and another gentleman, on the part of America, will be in London soon after the meeting of Parliament, to confer, as is supposed, with the Minister on the subject of commerce.

A correspondent has informed us, that it is already settled, as a measure of the Cabinet, that his Majesty's Speech on Tuesday next "is to make mention of a parliamentary reform either in the way of recommendation or suggestion; that the Speech is also to recommend the consideration of the interest of the public funds, and the care of the American Loyalties."

Whose is to be the motion for what has been so long talked of, so long in vain wished and wanted, an equal land-tax?

This single expedient of an equal land-tax would alone be sufficient to supply the deficiencies of the other taxes, and make such an addition to the sinking fund, as might excite a well-warranted hope of gradual liquidation.

The Lords of the Treasury have sent orders to the Commissioners of the Customs, dated the 5th instant, to enquire into the particulars of the illicit conveyance of live sheep and wool to the coasts of France; in consequence of which the Commissioners have issued orders on the above subject to the officers in the wool department at the Custom-house, London, as well as at the several out-ports. This is preparatory to bringing a bill into Parliament early in the approaching session for the more effectual prevention of smuggling sheep and wool out of the kingdom.

The unrepented act of the 8th of Elizabeth expresses, that after suffering a year's imprisonment, every offender convicted of conveying sheep or wool out of the kingdom, shall, "in some open market town, in the fulness of the market on the market day, have his left hand cut off, and that to be nailed up in the openest place of such market." And the same act says, the second offence shall be punished with death.

It is a fact, that the wool which sells for seven pounds in England, produces from fifteen to eighteen pounds per pack at Dunkirk and other places on the French coast.

It is said that Mr Staunton has come home principally for the purpose of settling a very unpleasant difficulty started by the French in regard to Trincomalee. By the peace it was agreed, that the French should restore it to us, for the purpose of our restoring it to the Dutch; but they insist on delivering it up immediately to the Dutch, without putting it at all into our hands. The friends of Mr Hastings say that this is Mr Staunton's chief business, and that he has left India in profound and general tranquillity.

There is certain intelligence in town, that the tyrant Tippoo hearing that Mrs Matthews, the wife of the General, was a most beautiful and accomplished woman, was desirous of getting her into his power, and for this reason he most insidiously compelled the General, her husband, to write a letter to his Lady, informing her, that he was used most handsomely by Tippoo the Sultan, and that his only want was her dear society; he therefore pressed her to come to him with all convenient speed. Mrs Matthews actually set out against the advice of those who knew the ferocious nature of Tippoo; but in her eagerness and haste to obey her husband, she outran her strength, and was taken ill. Before her recovery news came of the atrocious cruelties practising on our officers, and the Lady, by this seasonable delay, in all probability, saved both her honour and her life. Mrs Matthews is the daughter of Mr Jackson, late of the Admiralty.

The gentlemen of the army would do well to take up the case of Captain Mackenzie, as the ground of introduction of some more natural and fair tribunal for the arraignment of officers who may be charged with offences in foreign military governments. Let it be supposed that any Governor of a British settlement should expose to immediate execution the ringleader of a mutiny in his garrison against his life and command. How would such a man relish the stake of his property, his honour, and his life, in the hands of common law Judges, and London tradesmen, assembled at the Old Bailey, for the trial of offences merely of a civil nature. The law should be here amended, and general officers should have the sway in a court formed upon such an occasion.

A daily paper says, that an offer has been made to Earl Fitzwilliam, that the Marquisate of Rockingham, that belonged to his late uncle, should be revived in him. The offer, it is said, was made in the most handsome manner, without having any stipulated condition annexed to it. The noble Earl, however, politely declined the intended honour.

WIND AT DEAL, JAN. 21, S. by E.

EDINBURGH.

Extract of a letter from London, Jan. 22.

"Things remain in the same uncertain state respecting the Emperor of Germany and the States of Holland as before, except, indeed, that the Ambassador of their High Mightinesses is more frequent in his conferences with his Majesty, and the Secretaries of State, than ever.

"Great numbers of the members of both Houses are already come to town, and great numbers are continually arriving in order to attend their duty on Tuesday next, when both Houses are expected to be fully attended.

"Notwithstanding the sanguine hopes, entertained of a parliamentary reform, and the support it is expected to have from the Administration, it is a well known fact, that the Minister means to give it nothing more than his good wishes, or, in other words, that any motion on the subject will have as decent a funeral as possible.

"The meeting of the Opposition at the St Alban's Tavern was equally numerous as respectable, there being present about one hundred and twenty members of the Lower House, besides a great many Peers.

"Great care is said to have been taken in framing the Speech to be delivered from the Throne, in a manner to avoid, if possible, much altercation on the subject, and no great debate is expected to arise upon the motion for the address usually moved for; though Opposition, it is said, mean to keep a watchful eye on the conduct of Administration, and to expose every measure that may be open to attack."

Larbert, Jan. 18. 1785. Died the Rev. Dr Lachlan Taylor, minister of the gospel of the united parishes of Larbert and Dunipace.

Last night, the Earl of Fife arrived at Walker's Hotel on his way to London.

In our last, we gave a short account of the pleadings on the relevancy of the indictment in the case of Lieutenant Storie, for the murder of William Stuart surgeon in Pailey. The examination of witnesses being concluded, the Lord Advocate charged the Jury on the part of the prosecutors. He was followed by Mr MacLaurin for the panel. The Lord Justice Clerk then proceeded to sum up the evidence, in which he observed there was the less reason to be minute, as the two learned gentlemen, who before addressed them, had already done that business with the greatest propriety and candour. It, therefore, in a great measure, only remained for him to inform the Jury, what he took the liberty of hinting to them in a former stage of the trial, that, if the panel was successful in proving the defence set up for him, he could not be found guilty of murder, but only of culpable homicide. This, his Lordship added, he, as well as the other Judges, were fully satisfied was established by the proof led in this case, and, consequently, had no doubt that the Jury would return a verdict, acquitting the panel of murder, but finding him guilty of culpable homicide. The Jury were then inclosed; and yesterday, at one o'clock, returned a verdict, all in one voice finding the panel not guilty of murder; but, at the same time, finding him guilty of culpable homicide. The consideration of the sentence to be pronounced, in consequence of the above verdict, is delayed till Saturday next at twelve o'clock.

Yesterday, being the day appointed for the moderation of a call in favour of the Rev. Mr William Simpson, minister of Morebattle, to be one of the ministers of this city; in room of the Rev. Dr Webster deceased, the same was presented at a meeting of the General Sessions, and signed in the usual manner. Previous to which, however, a debate took place concerning the wording of the call, which was alleged to be contrary to the form used upon such occasions; and those reverend gentlemen who objected to it upon that account, signed it under protest, that their so doing should not be held as any homologation of such an innovation. It was contended, on the other hand, that nothing contained in the call was different from the ordinary form, except stating the fact, of Mr Simpson's being called to Lady Yester's Church, which was done by his own consent, instead of the Tolbooth Church, to which he received the presentation from the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Council; and that, without such preamble, justice could not have been done to all parties concerned.

The above call was this day presented to the Presbytery, which they were pleased to sustain. Upon this occasion also, some trifling debate took place; when a motion was made by the Reverend Mr Kemp, that a committee of their number should be appointed to draw up the form of a call, which, when agreed to by the Presbytery, should be recorded in their books, and that form followed in all time coming, without deviation, unless the particular circumstances of the case should render such deviation necessary, and the Presbytery should approve of it. This motion was agreed to, and a committee appointed. There was no other business of any importance before this meeting of Presbytery.

The Committees for a reform of the county elections in Scotland, have unanimously resolved to apply to Parliament immediately for an act to abolish nominal and fictitious votes, an abuse long complained of, as contrary to the rights of the real voters, and destructive of the morals of the people.

The Committees respecting the distillery act, passed last session, have also unanimously agreed to apply to Parliament to have that act altered.

Saturday forenoon, the inhabitants of Wragby, in the county of Lincoln, were much diverted by the son of a farmer riding a bull instead of a horse. The farmer having entered only one riding horse, and fearful of being made to pay a fine if he rode one of the plough horses, and the son being very desirous to pay a visit with his father, was the cause of this adventure. The bull performed the journey entirely to the satisfaction of the rider and all the spectators.

The Love and Unity of Aberdeen, Captain Brown, arrived at Philadelphia the 14th November, all well.

They write from Aberdeen, that, for about a week past, the weather has been open and mild; the strong drying winds from the S. W. have cleared off all the snow, and plowing goes on very briskly all over the country. This is a fortunate circumstance for farmers, considering how far behind the labouring was put, owing to the early commencement of the storm.

The quantity counterfeit halfpence lately imported into this country, and still importing, is very troublesome to retail shopkeepers and others. If this p. Alice continues, an example should be made of some of the most notorious importers; and on purpose to answer the circulation, government should send down a quantity of new halfpence, which would be the best way to put a stop to this growing evil.

Monday night some villains broke into a shop in the Graft-market, and carried off a considerable quantity of linen cloth which had been taken into the bleachfield, besides dressed lint, hardware, and other goods. It is said the poor shopkeeper can ill sustain such a heavy loss.

Extract of a letter from Dumfries, Jan. 25.

"Last Tuesday, was brought on before the Sheriff-court here, the trial at the instance of the Fiscal Court, and Thomas Davidson, against forty-two persons for assaulting the Buchanites at Clovenstone, on the 24th ult. and breaking into the house they occupied, belonging to Davidson, and possessed jointly by him and them. The Court was uncommonly crowded, and the proof was not finished till next day at one o'clock, owing, in a great measure, to the backwardness of the witnesses to bear evidence, it being with the utmost difficulty that they were made to discover the truth; and the first witness was committed to jail, after undergoing an examination of two hours, for prevaricating and suppressing the truth. However, the Sheriff found the libel proven against thirteen of the defendants, and fined five of them in thirty pounds Scots, and the other eight in twenty pounds Scots, and appointed them to find caution to keep the peace for twelve months, and continued the cause against the other defendants for five weeks. Against which sentence, although thought very moderate by every member of Court, the defendants have entered an appeal to the Circuit Court of Justiciary, to be held here in May next. But it is generally thought and hoped, for the honour of the laws of this country, that, if they persist and bring the matter before the Supreme Court, they will be made to feel the law in a more exemplary manner from the Lords of Justiciary than they have done from the Sheriff."

The present age teems with discoveries of the most useful kind. Amongst those, none has brought so much credit or more profit to its author than that of the preparation of the truly curious Indian Earth, called by the natives Aouara, to the use of which is ascribed that beautiful set of teeth the Chinese boast of above all European nations. It sells now under the very proper name of Asiatic Tooth Powder, and may safely be said to challenge comparison with all tooth powders ever known in Europe, both as to the safety of its use, and its uncommon efficacy. Hence the general use it is brought into among all genteel classes of people in this kingdom. The beautiful white it gives to the teeth accounts for the laughing mood Ladies and Gentlemen affect to be in upon every trifling occasion. The ton in most polite circles is, who has got the whitest teeth; and the wonderful effects of the Asiatic Tooth Powder is a most common topic.

S I R,

FORMERLY there were sanctuaries in Britain that possessed a legal right to protect atrocious criminals from the hands of justice. The same absurdity, with many others, still exists in certain Catholic countries.

A member of the College of Justice, who hath landed property in any county of Scotland, pays the King's cess, charity to the poor, and minister's stipend. Similar payments, besides town's burdens, take place, if he hath real property in any burgh in Scotland, Edinburgh excepted. There the man of justice is exempted from the town's impost upon wine and spirits, although it is paid by every other person. He contributes nothing as a legal payment either to kirk or poor; and although the man of justice is protected by the watchmen and firemen, &c. both in his person and property, yet, strange to tell! even for evident value received, the man of justice refuses to pay his share.

Edinburgh, of late, has been much improved and enlarged. She is certainly the second city in Britain, as a residence for genteel company; and bids fair to attract from England many of that denomination. From the West Port to the bottom of the Canongate it measures at least a good Scotch mile; and yet, in this great stretch, there is only one passage for carriages from the south to the High-Street and to the New Town, viz. St. Mary's Wynd. This pass is a great and inevitable thorough-fare, and yet so narrow, that in no place can two carriages pass with ease; and in one place they cannot pass at all. The turn at the Cowgate Port, where four roads meet, is sharp and narrow. At the Netherbow Port, where four roads likewise meet, there is, towards Leith, a dangerous steep declivity; and, indeed, the difficulty of the passage is here so great, that a couple of sentinels are necessary to prevent voluntary difficulties; real ones are unavoidable. St. Mary's Wynd measures 260 ordinary walking steps of a man of sixty. Many improvements are wanting. A South Bridge is not merely an improvement; it is absolutely necessary. Accordingly, it was very recently proposed to set a-going, upon conjunct funds, 1. The South Bridge; 2. A Carriage-way along the Bridge, from Nicholson's Park to the Tron-Kirk; 3. Abolition of Impost upon Spirits and Wine; 4. A Bridewell; 5. Removal of the City Walls and Gates; And, 6. Additional Lamps. It was proposed, as part of the ways and means for carrying on these conjunct improvements, that the members of the College of Justice should pay to kirk and poor, pari passu with the other citizens; but that, for reasons to me unknown, they should still be exempted from watch-money; and that, like other citizens, they should pay, upon a house of 50 l. per annum, 15s. for additional lamps, and 8s. as substitution for impost. It is to be observed, that the proposed improvements are in one respect more advantageous to the College of Justice than to others; because the Gentlemen of the Long Robe keep more carriages than all Edinburgh besides.

The Senators of the College of Justice have a free seat in church, in their public character as Judges. They have, besides, a free seat for their families. These favours exceed what is now asked from them, under the two heads of "Lamp Money," and "Substitution for Impost." I am satisfied in my own mind, that the exemptions which are now enjoyed within Edinburgh, by the members of the College of Justice, are very unreasonable and unjust; but then, like sanctuaries of old, they may be perfectly legal. To suppose that lawyers will relinquish, by compulsion, a law favourable to themselves, though unjust to others, is, I am afraid, too violent a hypothesis. Besides, I am told that the requisition, on the part of the Good

Town, was not brought forward in a very conciliating manner.—A favour is surely worth asking. I would therefore approach these Gentlemen in a manner most likely to awaken their generosity, and regard for the public. I would ask them, as a favour, to pass a self-denying ordinance: I would signify to them, that the favour asked by the public, though great in cumulo, is a trifle to individuals; and that the remembrance of their generosity, in giving up a trifling personal exemption in favour of the public, of which they themselves are part, should be perpetuated to posterity upon a handsome medalion, to be erected on an eminent part of the Bridge. The Gentlemen of the Faculty of Advocates always get a learned and often a liberal education. Many of them, as men of family and fortune, enjoy besides the advantage of having travelled. They have seen and admired the architecture, and other fine arts of Italy. The works and praises of distinguished artists are frequent in their mouths; and yet, strange to tell! the Faculty of Advocates refuses its mite, to render the capital of their country; the place probably of their own education and that of their children; the place of their own six months residence, amusement, and elegant society: they refuse, I say, their mite, to render Edinburgh more commodious and ornamented. If the Gentlemen of the Long Robe could invert the case, and throw upon the Burghers, commonly so called, the imputation of a fordid selfish negative, it is likely there would be no want of opprobrious epithets.

Gentlemen who oppose improvements in Edinburgh, under the absurd idea of making court to Mr. Fox, will find themselves much mistaken in their man. It is well known that Charles possesses a liberal and elevated mind; that he is an honest fellow, and a man of taste. The celibacy of the clergy is to be reprobated for one among many other reasons, because it prevents posterity from glorying in the munificence of people who might have been one's ancestors. In Oxford and Cambridge, no less than twelve colleges were built and endowed by clergymen. Women were ambitious of this real glory. Cambridge boasts of five fair foundresses of colleges and halls. Oxford is not so fortunate in this respect. She boasts only of one, viz. Elizabeth Tudor. The Old and New Colleges of Aberdeen owe their existence to Bishop Elphinstone, and the family of Marischal. Archbishop Turnbull was the founder of the University of Glasgow. Bishop Wardlaw founded the University of St. Andrew's. St. Salvador's College was added by Bishop Kennedy; St. Leonard's College by Hepburn prior of St. Andrew's. King James VI. though no bishop, was at least their good friend, and a great divine for a last century man. He is the last royal founder in Britain; and, though poor enough, God knows, he founded the College of Edinburgh, anno 1580.

It is like marrow to one's bones to think, that such people were, and we must look down with contempt upon mean drivelling exemptions, that oppose what tends to utility and ornament in the metropolis of one's country. The Faculty of Advocates refuses to part with little mean partial exemptions, and thereby, as far as lies in its power, the Faculty defeats splendid improvements, of which they were to enjoy their full share. The other branches of the College of Justice have not been convened on the subject. The proposed improvements are all desirable. The Bridge is necessary—What then is to be done? I have thought of a toll upon the Bridge. The word toll is ungrateful to the ear; it supposes a hand put into one's pocket. But how are improvements to be had without? Some tolls are meant to be inevitable, and indeed to evade them is penal. Others, such as Blackfriars and the one now proposed, are voluntary; for with us, not only are the old avenues left free, but a new free one is to be opened from Nicholson's Park to the Cowgate, and from the Cowgate to the Tron-Kirk. If all carriages from the south were to land at the Tron-Kirk, where four very frequent roads would meet, the confluence would be too great, and would be dangerous to the limbs and lives of the lieges. A toll would lessen the danger, because the poorer sort would use other avenues. Suppose the toll to be productive, how much the money be applied? 1st, To indemnify the town for her impost; 2d, to endow a Bridewell; 3d, to increase lamps. When these appropriations are complete, let the toll go towards building a new College.—Of the present we may say with truth what was said of Buchanan, it is both decus et dedecus patrie.

For Bruises, Sprains, Rheumatism, Chilblains, &c.

DR STEERS'S OPODELDOC.

Sold, by appointment of the Proprietor, by Mr FRANCIS NEWBERRY, St Paul's Church-Yard, London; and Messrs HUBBARD, ELDER, and Co. facing the Tron-Church, Edinburgh.

THIS incomparable Opedelloc (so universally esteemed for its superior efficacy), is warm, penetrating, and attenuating, and is therefore an excellent embrocation for the Gout and Rheumatism, dissolving the coagulated lymph, of which those diseases are formed.

In wounded tendons it is likewise of the greatest service, by preventing the juice which oozes out of them from fixing, and, by its tension, occasioning those fatal effects that often arise from them.

Bruises and sprains it infallibly cures; for it keeps the extravasated lymph and blood perfectly dissolved, and prevents their fixing in the interstices of the vessels, till nature either takes them up by the resorbed blood, or expels them through the pores of the skin.

Long-contracted Sprains are removed by it, and it is of the utmost service for weak and rickety children; as also for numbness, stiffness, or weakness in the joints.

It is a most efficacious remedy for Burns and Scalds, extracting the fire very soon; and, if used immediately, will entirely prevent them from blistering.

It speedily cures violent pinches and wounds under the Nails; is excellent for a fresh cut, and is of infinite use for the sting of wasps, &c. and the bite of Gnats and other venomous insects.

For chilblains, or chaps in the hands or feet, it is by far the best remedy known, removing them very speedily; and, if applied in time, will hinder them from breaking.

N. B. It is remarkably pleasant to the smell, and for sudden headaches, equal to any of the Volatile Effluences.

MEDICAL REFLECTIONS,

And a remarkable Fact.

COUGHS, HECTIC FEVERS, and CONSUMPTIONS, are peculiarly endemic to England, rendered by its insular situation particularly subject to fogs and noxious vapours. The very general and constant use of pit-coal in the article of fuel also tends, from its sulphureous quality, in no slight degree, to increase and confirm that dreadful malady, the Phthisis Pulmonalis, or Consumption of the Lungs, often attended with a general atrophy of the system; disorders to which many thousands, particularly of youth, male and female, annually fall sacrifices in this country, and which even the most eminent of the Faculty are too often baffled in their endeavours to remove, and (sad alternative!) are ultimately compelled to resign their patients to the grave. Happily such are the benign and salutary effects of that truly divine remedy, Dr NORRIS'S DROPS, that they are no less efficacious and certain in speedily and safely curing Coughs, Hectic Fevers, and Consumptions, than they are great and wonderful in restoring to health the afflicted with inflammatory and putrid fevers. When taken early in these disorders, they are justly infallible; and that the patient, in more advanced stages of disease, may hope (under Heaven) for relief and cure, the following letter, addressed to Dr Norris, is a testimony no less convincing than authentic.

TO DR. NORRIS, LONDON.

SIR, In gratitude to you, and for the information of the afflicted, I beg leave to say, that under God I am indebted to your excellent Drops for my life, and the good health I now enjoy. It was about six months since that I was seized with cold chills and an inward fever, which brought me very low; and though I was under the hands of an eminent physician, and also an apothecary, who did their utmost to my relief during the space of three months, at the expence of more than ten pounds, yet the disorder baffled all their skill, and I was, after taking a variety of medicines, pronounced to be in a decline, and advised to return home for the air. This I did, and was then happily and earnestly intreated to make trial of your drops by my brother's wife. I sent for a bottle, and in a fortnight after taking them was greatly mended. In short, by only three half-crown bottles, I was perfectly restored, and am now your thankful,

And very grateful humble servant,

HANDLEY, Nov. 30, 1784.

LEWIS SNOW.

P. S. It was through my sister's having cured her eldest son by these drops of an ague and fever, which had afflicted him for above three years, that he was induced to advise my taking this genial restorative.

These drops are sold wholesale and retail by Dr Norris, removed from Bridge-street to his house Lower Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, corner of James-street, where he is consulted as usual.—Also, by his appointment, in bottles at 2 s. 5 d.—4 s. 10 d.—and 10 s. 6 d. each (besides the duty), by Messrs Hubbard, Elder, and Company, opposite the Tron-church, Edinburgh.
